CHANGE OF NAME !
MERCADO & CO SUCCESSORS TO Mercado & Seully have been obliged for their own protection and the safety of the public, to change the name of their celebrated Bitters to
MERCADO'S
Native California Wine
BITTERS
We subjoin the following affidavit in an injunction suit formerly pending between Mercado & Seully plaintiffs and G A Simon defendant:
P Sainsevain, being duly sworn says "That the article known as Sainsevain's California Wine Bitters was manufactured by Mercado & Seully about the month of March 1861 without the said Sainsevain Brothers having any concern in the manufacture thereof. The deponent has always known and considered said Mercado & Seully as the Sole Proprietors of the Sainsevain California Wine Bitters.
Notwithstanding the above affidavit the said P Sainsevain is putting up a compound under the name of Sainsevain's California Wine Bitters representing it to be the same as our celebrated Bitters which we have been manufacturing and selling in immense quantities since 1860, and also affixing a nearly similar label to that used on our genuine Wine Bitters. BE NOT DECEIVED! Send for
NATIVE CALIFORNIA WINE BITTERS
And you will obtain the same popular beverage so favorably known since 1860. Beware of Counterfeits! Purchasers of our Wine Bitters are requested to observe the familiar old yellow label and see that the words, MERCADO & SEULLY SAN FRANCISCO are engraved on the Government stamp pasted over the cork of each bottle. This is the only effectual security against the counterfeit imitation.

DATES TO JANUARY 15

Congressional

WASHINGTON, Jan 15.—In the Senate Stewart from the Judiciary Committee reported the following Constitutional Amendment and asked that the committee be discharged from further consideration of the subject:

"Article 15th. The right of citizens of the United States to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color, or previous servitude."

Sherman offered a resolution inquiring of the Secretary of the Treasury the amount paid to the Baltimore Railroad Company for the transportation of men and supplies each year during the war.

Yates introduced a bill to enable the people of Colorado Territory to form a State Government. Referred to Committee on Territories.

The morning hour expired and Sherman's resolution went over under rule.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the Sue Murphy bill. After much discussion the bill and amendments were recommended to the Committee on Claims.

The credentials of Senator Buckingham were presented.

Adjourned.

In the House after sundry important business the consideration of the Niagara Ship Canal bill was resumed.

Judd made a lengthy speech in support of the bill.

Butler of Massachusetts also advocated the bill. In the course of his speech he said: Gentlemen need feel no apprehension on account of the canal running through Canada soil, because before the canal is completed that soil will be ours—not by conquest or purchase but by the will and desire of a majority of its inhabitants.

Washburne opposed the bill on account of the financial condition of the country.

Bailey Spaulding Mullen and Chandler also opposed the bill.

Allison, Logan, Barnes and Ingersoll favored it.

A motion to lay the bill on the table was lost—6 ayes to 56 noes. After further discussion the bill was defeated by reference to Committee of the Whole—ayes 81, noes 60.

Adjourned.

Gov Bullock's Message

ATLANTA GA, Jan 15.—Gov Bullock's message was sent to the Legislature to-day. He announces that on the 4th of December last he addressed a communication to Congress, setting forth that the reconstruction laws had not been fully executed in Georgia. He reviews the action of the Legislature in expelling the colored members and assures the members that Congress is the sole interpreter of the true intent and meaning of the reconstruction laws, and the final arbitrator in the question of their execution. He says there is not, in Georgia, adequate protection for life, property and the free expression of political opinion. He assures them that Congress will not pause in the great work of reconstruction and regeneration until we fully acquiesce in the great fact that our late slaves are entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities of other men before the law, and until freedom from proscription is universally established for all classes. He congratulates the Legislature on the satisfactory condition of the State finances.

HAVANA, Jan 15.—All the Generals publish accounts of an engagement between the troops and Revolutionists, but nothing decisive is yet known to have occurred.

An original copy of the so-called proclamation, issued by the revolutionary General, has been received here. It does not, as far as has been reported, abolish slavery at once, but counsels the owners to give the slaves their freedom and leaves the decision to the people, who may decide upon immediate emancipation coupled with indemnification to those owners who are in favor of the revolutionary cause.

Paraguayan Affairs.

LISBON, Jan 15.—Rio Janeiro advices are to Dec 14th. They state that the allied army made a vigorous assault on the Paraguayan stronghold at Villetta. After a desperate battle they succeeded in carrying the place. Lopez's army was utterly routed and destroyed. The allies captured over 3 000 prisoners of war. Lopez barely escaped with 900 followers. This victory has opened the way to Asuncion, to which place the Brazilian ironclads had gone.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan 14, via Lisbon 15.—At last accounts from the seat of war the allies held Villetta and Angostura. Large stores of ammunition and provisions fell into their hands. The loss of the Paraguayans in killed and wounded was very heavy. The Paraguayans claim that the allied forces had 600 killed and wounded in the recent battle which took place on the 5th of December. [illegible] Arg[illegible] was mortally wounded.

Gen McMahon, the American Minister, was in the Paraguayan camp. A good understanding exists between Lopez and the American Minister.

Quite a revival is going on among the Baptists in Scott Valley; 16 men were baptized last week.

The January term of the District Court commences next Monday. The docket is unusually large, numbering fifteen cases. The snow on the road over Scott Mountain is about three feet deep, which is the least at this season of the year for the last five years. Stages making regular time. Weather beautifully clear and cold.

The Labor Question

Both the [illegible] papers in this city are again in [illegible] because [illegible] have been employed in the [illegible] factory at Oregon City. But with all their words on this subject these papers do not [illegible] anything. They have nothing to say about the relations of labor and capital; they simply rant after the fashion of shallow demagogues, and try to turn the circumstance at Oregon City to political account. A storm of obloquy is showered upon the "Radicals" for their alleged agency in ousting poor but honest white laborers from our factories, and the Republican party is charged with the odium of being the enemy of our laboring classes. Says one of these organs: "White men who voted with the Republican party must not complain if the men they assisted to place in power now carry out the programme contrary to their wishes and injurious to their interests." Indeed! Let us see what manner of men they are who are putting into practice these odious "Radical principles." Who are they who have engaged in this effort "to degrade white labor?"

The men who own and control the Oregon City factory are Democrats. No Republican is connected with the management of the establishment. It is Democrats then who are engaged in the work which our neighbors stigmatize as atrocious. It is Democrats who are "discriminating against white labor." It is Democrats who have done this thing which these partisan organs, in their excessive zeal denounce as an indefensible outrage. These "heartless capitalists" are Democrats every one. It is Democrats who have been the first to introduce the "moon eyed heathen" into our factories "to crowd out the white labor-er." And the OREGONIAN which is accused of being an "apologist" for these capitalists "in their acts of oppression towards the poor," has, if the charge be true, committed the sin of "apologizing" for as good Democrats as there are in Oregon, and of insisting that they have a right to manage their own business as they please!

It will be seen, therefore, that even Democrats do not hesitate to employ mongrel labor, that Democrats have no objection to "placing side by side the fair Caucasian and the tawny Celestial;" that Democrats even take the lead in this thing and set the example of "discriminating against white labor." How much party capital do the two Democratic organs of this city and the Democratic Sheriff of Clackamas county expect to make out of these facts? They denounce the Republicans for the iniquity of Chinese labor in the Oregon City factory, when they should be leveling their shafts at members of their own party who are the authors of the act they so savagely condemn!

It is a fact which is supported and confirmed by the observation of every intelligent man, that Democrats are employers of Chinese labor as much as Republicans. Democrats are just as anxious as Republicans to get their work done at little cost. This is no party question at all, and none but mumping [illegible] fools seek to connect it with party politics. The fact that the owners and managers of the Oregon City factory are Democrats is an illustration which shows that this matter has nothing to do with party. Who can cite an instance where a Democrat ever [illegible] to employ a person of "inferior race" when he could save money by employing him? If there ever was such an instance, so [illegible] shows the universal [illegible] of the opposite rule. There is not a Democratic paper in this country which would hesitate to employ Chinese labor, if such labor could be made available at a saving of money. The proprietor of the Herald would discharge his whole force, editors and all, to make room for Chinese employes, if Wa-Kee could furnish him competent workmen at reduced rates. We would not say that it would not be an improvement for him to try the experiment at at once.

In connection with this matter there is much animadversion upon the Chinese treaty. Now everybody knows that there were Chinese here in large numbers before that treaty was formed. While the Federal and State governments were yet under Democratic control, the Chinese came to our Pacific [illegible] by tens of thousands. The General Government made no effort to keep them [illegible]. The administrations of Pierce and Buchanan, supported by Congresses overwhelmingly Democratic, took no measures to "protect" the whites of America against the "mongrel hordes of Asia." At that time the Chinese were numerous in California as they are now. From that State they have gradually spread over the whole coast. If their presence here is a curse, that curse, like the rebellion, was left as a legacy to the country by the Democratic party when it was driven from power.

As Democrats are foremost in employing Chinese labor in Oregon, what remedy would the wise men of the Democratic party propose? Are Republicans to be censured for the propensity to employ cheap labor, which is continually manifested by Democrats among us? Are we to be [illegible] because we do not provide laws to prevent and punish such action as that taken by the Democrats of the manufacturing company at Oregon City? This would be in keeping with the Democratic habit of condemning the "Radicals" because they do not provide penal enactments to prevent Democrats from marrying niggers. The two cases are, in principle exactly alike.

In a former article we said: "It is the fashion to regard capital as the enemy of labor. Nothing is more erroneous. Without capital there would be no wages at all." The Herald quotes this and sneeringly remarks: "That is good Republican doctrine of to-day." And pray is it not good common sense doctrine of every day? Observe what it is the Herald takes issue with. That paper regards capital as the enemy of labor! It holds then, that every man who has capital is the object of the envy and rapacity of those whom it denominates "the poor." This is identically the principle of the Jacobins of 1793, which was afterwards put in a convenient formula by Proudhon, when he asserted that property was a crime. The principle advanced by the Herald would quickly abolish all property. Every man whose condition in life compels him to labor with his hands is to be held up as an object of pity and taught that the owner of property is his enemy and oppressor. How long could civilized society stand on such a basis? Who does not know that it is the characteristic essence of property, formed out of the combined principles of its acquisition and conservation, to be unequal? How can the rights of property be secured in any case unless the great masses are beyond the reach of interference and out of the possibility of danger? If this be done the great masses then form a natural rampart about the lesser properties in all their gradations. But the Herald says: "We respect capital and the men who wield it rightfully, but we do not worship it nor concede to it lordly privileges." Who is to be the judge whether capital is wielded rightfully or not, the owner or some other person? What would that paper call a concession of lordly privileges to capital? Is it worshipping capital or conceding too much to it to assert that its possessor has a right to manage it in his own way, subject to the laws, to engage in such schemes as he may see fit, to employ the kind of labor he may desire and to get it on as favorable terms as he can? Our Democratic papers say as much. They say in another way just what the operative at Oregon City said in his letter to the owners of the factory: "We Coution you never to lower the wagers a nother cent if you do it will be at the expense of your lives for we are bound to protect our rights."

If monied men are not allowed to have exclusive control of their money how long would there be any monied men? Any interference with their operations would quickly dissipate the largest accumulations. All capital is managed on the principle of gain from the largest masses to the smallest accumulations it is employed in such a way as its owners deem likely to yield the largest increase. "This love of lucre," says Burke "though sometimes carried to a ridiculous, sometimes a vicious excess, is the grand cause of prosperity in all states. It is the part of the statesman to employ this principle as he finds it. It is his part in this case as in all other cases where he is to make use of the general energies of nature, to take them as he finds them."

The Commercial's wisdom is exactly at par with the Herald's. Men who know nothing about labor, men who never so much as caused an additional blade of grass to grow, often set themselves up as the champions of the laboring classes and pretend to sympathize with their lot. In one of the Commercial's tirades, (which do not deserve to be honored with the name of argument) the Republican party is vilified because, as that paper alleges, it asserts "that the capitalist has a right to get labor at as low rates as he can." The Republican party asserts nothing on this subject, for it has nothing to do with it, but every man of sense asserts this principle. It is a principle which is now, which always has been, and which always will be, true. It is as much a truth as the law of gravitation. It is practised by every man who employs labor. It has been practised by the Democratic newspapers of this city in reducing printers' wages. It is practised by the capitalist who contracts for the building of a ship, and by the common laborer who hires a Chinaman to saw him a cord of wood at lower rates than he could afford to saw it himself. The wonder is that any person can be so insane as to be unable to recognize this most obvious principle in the affairs of men.

But while the employer has a right to get labor at as low rates as he can, the laborer has a right to get the highest wages he can obtain. It is his right to demand any sum he may choose to name, to stand out for it and to refuse to work unless he gets it. Both the capitalist and the laborer have a right to take their own course. When labor is abundant wages will fall, when it is scarce wages will rise. This is the very same law which governs all in every where commodities are bought and sold. For labor is a commodity in the market the same as anything else that is bought and sold for money. He who has labor to sell naturally wants the most that he can get for it; he who buys labor desires to secure it on such terms as will enable him to profit by the transaction. One of these besotted partisan journals indignantly exclaims that "Abolitionists now talk as glibly about buying labor as ever a planter talked about buying a negro." The difference then, between your Abolitionist and Democrat is that the former believes in buying labor and paying for it, and the latter believes in forcing the laborer, if he happens to have a colored skin, to work for nothing. These journals think it all right for the capitalist to have the labor of the "inferior races" for nothing, but when he pays this class of laborers, he becomes a "heartless oppressor of white men." If the capitalist could secure slave labor enough, of course he would not employ paid labor, and white men could get no wages at all. Yet these Democratic papers are always chanting the praises of slavery, and asserting that when the "inferior races" work for nothing they are not in the way of the white man, but when they are paid for their labor they immediately come into competition with him. They have no objection to allowing the capitalist the whole profits of enforced labor but they are terribly aroused and talk about a "money despotism" when he is compelled to pay for his labor instead of getting it for nothing! To get a Chinaman's or negro's labor without compensation is no wrong to the white laborer, but to pay wages to the Chinaman or negro is fearful outrage on the white laboring classes! Such is the logic which these partisan journals are employing in the discussion of this question. Had slaves been introduced into the Oregon City factory, to crowd out the former employes not a word would have been uttered by these champions of white labor.

CARL SCHURZ.—The Springfield, (Mass.) Republican with great good judgement says: "We hear with pleasure that Carl Schurz is likely to be chosen Senator from Missouri in place of Henderson. Gen. Schurz is not only an able editor, eloquent orator and sound politician but an honest man, of national reputation and national aims. He will bring to the Senate abilities and training equal to old Senators, while, as the representative in that body of the German citizens who are so numerous throughout the country and particularly in Missouri, his position will be one of mark. He can bring in himself some of the best traits of the German and the American people and it is eminently proper that such men should be honored in the land of their adoption."

NOT A MUZZLED PRESS.—The Herald kindly advises the OREGONIAN to change its course on the extra session question and join the Democrats in urging the Governor to convene the Legislature. We take this occasion to inform the Herald that the OREGONIAN is an independent paper, that it pursues such a course as it thinks fit and right and that it does not yield to outside pressure in its management. In short, the OREGONIAN is not a muzzled press. The Herald, we hope, will understand.

CORRECTION.—By inadvertence we stated the other day that Judge Deady had been nominated for Regent of the University of California. The office for which he was nominated was President of the University. We think it unlikely that the call, if made, would be accepted.

BY STATE TELEGRAPH

JACKSONVILLE, Jan. 16.—One new case of small pox reported to-day. There have been three deaths from small pox since Friday, one of which was Mrs. Love, who died this morning. She was the widow of [illegible] and was a lady well known and highly esteemed in Southern Oregon. Her death has created universal sorrow. So far there have been forty six cases here, twelve of which have proved fatal. Three cases are almost hopeless and thus far every case of the confluent type has resulted in death. The Catholic priests and Sisters of Charity are untiring in their devotion to the sick and all are doing their best to combat the disease.

The work of clearing out the Long Tom for the purposes of navigation is under way. It is expected that a steamer will be sent up the stream before a great while.

The Southern View of the South.

The New Orleans Crescent is a paper distinctively and essentially Southern in its views and opinions. Its utterances on the condition of the South ought therefore to be satisfactory to Northern Democrats. But those Northern journals which mourn over the abolition of slavery are asserting that emancipation was a death blow to Southern industry and prosperity, while the Crescent presents the case in a way which completely refutes all their declarations. That journal says that "in the elements of real and independent wealth the Southern States were never richer than now, perhaps never so rich. Formerly the bulk of their products and the most eligible of their lands were represented by a few planters and a few factors. There was great enterprise and in a certain sense there was no lack of accumulation. But the enterprise involved the perpetuation of debt and mortgage and the accumulation was of such a nature as to prevent improvement of property from keeping pace with the increase of its quantity." Thus Southern people have discovered that the system which they strove so hard to perpetuate was injurious to their real interests. The New Orleans paper says the tendency of slavery was to exhaust without renewing the soil, to produce an unhealthy congestion of capital, to impede an equal diffusion of wealth and comfort, and to retard industrial commercial and social progress in many important particulars. In the following extract the Crescent [illegible] its [illegible] whole case against the admirers of slavery. We commend the remarks of this Southern Democratic journal to those Northern flunkies of the slave system who are continually asserting that the South has been impoverished and ruined by emancipation:

From 1865 to 1869 agriculture in the South was in a state of painful and convulsive transition. It was not in human nature or in the nature of material conditions, to pass easily and prosperously from the old order to the new order of things. Either the new wheels would not run at all in the old grooves or would only run there at the cost of a ruinous friction, and to provide the new grooves required to enable the new wheels to run with facility and profit, was a problem which only time and experiment could solve. These difficulties of transition were complicated with exceptional calamities, such as overflows and the cotton worm, so that, at the beginning of 1868, the Southern planter without cash, without credit, stood, so to speak, stark and friendless, simply the exponent of three successive failures and three terrible disappointments. But right here was the turning point of his destiny. Necessity, that sternest but kindliest of foster mothers, took him under her tutelage and taught him invention. He learned that it was possible to dispense with borrowed capital and that the truest road to success lay in dependence upon his own energy and skill. His faculty of organization was developed in new directions. He found out a way to impress upon many of the freedmen the wholesome lesson which he himself had learned. These freedmen understanding at length, in spite of the delusive expectations which they had indulged of illimitable bounty in store for them as "wards of the nation" that they must work or starve, wisely concluded to work. Thus the planter was enabled to obtain at the rate of about one hundred and fifty dollars a year, laborers, who, under the old system would have represented a cash investment on his part of about twelve hundred dollars each.

The result is that enough grain is produced in the South the present year to feed its whole population, either in the shape of breadstuffs or an equivalent of beef and bacon. Beyond this it is estimated that there will be a surplus for sale, consisting of say, two million and a half bales of cotton, one hundred and twenty thousand hogsheads of sugar, together with liberal crops of tobacco, rice, and considerable quantities of other marketable products, all of which, it is supposed, will amount to the aggregate value of three hundred million dollars.

At no former period was there realized by agricultural industry at the South so large a sum free from pre-engagements on account of incidental debts. There is no reason why the bulk of it should not be distributed, first of all, among the Southern people at large, and fix itself there in the shape of actual investments. And we believe that it will, in fact, contribute more than the proceeds of any former agricultural season to build up an active and profitable home trade, salutary home enterprises and all the constituents that give elegance, beauty and comfort to home life.

RAILROAD ITEM.—While some men are trucks to bear the burdens of the earth, or furnace-grates to bear the fires and to be consumed in obscurity, other are driving wheels, which give life and motion to all with whom they are connected. Kohn & Fishel the leading Dry Goods merchants of Portland are the driving wheels of trade in that city. They conceived and carried on to completion a work nobler than the Pyramids grander than the gardens of Nineveh, or the walls of Babylon, for their work is not a monument for the dead, neither the gratification of a luxuriant fancy but it is a new pathway for purchasers, a link to bind the chain of families and the hearts of men.

S. army he engaged in business at [illegible] until 185[illegible], when he was elected County Auditor, which office he continued to hold until 1867. Mr. Ahern had an open and generous heart, and no man in the county could boast of a greater number of truer and warmer friends than he. His death is generally regretted, and [illegible] the tokens of respect that are shown to his [illegible]. His funeral took place on Wednesday, under the [illegible] of the Vancouver Fire Engine Co. On Friday evening last about 7 o'clock, at [illegible] landing, on the Cowlitz, some six miles above [illegible], Mr. James Bishop and Andrew Patton, during an altercation [illegible] the division of the products of rented land, came to blows, and Mr. James Geary [illegible] near, in his attempt to command peace, accidentally [illegible] his thumb and fore finger cut to the bone [illegible] the fight between Patton and Bishop being [illegible] received a frightful cut reaching [illegible] the back of the neck to the mouth, exposing the jaw [illegible] Mr. P. [illegible] RAILROAD OPERATIONS.—From the Enterprise [illegible] that Mr. W. W. Sheldon reports Mill No. 2 now [illegible] an average of 1,100 ties per day, or at the [illegible] from 30,000 to 40,000 feet of lumber daily. At [illegible] one mill is supplying ties for ten miles of [illegible] per month, working 11 hours daily. Mill No. 3 is [illegible], for bridges and trestle-work. All hands [illegible] on the 12th. The force is still kept full and [illegible]. The machine shops of East Portland [illegible] supplied with some very expensive and [illegible], to be used in the construction of passenger cars, etc.

[illegible] MOVEMENT AT OREGON CITY.—Of the [illegible] of "laborers" at Oregon City last week, [illegible] says: "The matter is looked upon here [illegible] to revival of the lost spirits of Democracy [illegible] are assured by Mr. Jacobs, that the reasons [illegible] elsewhere are without foundation in [illegible] no white laborer has been discharged to give [illegible] in the factory—but that some certain [illegible] who are constantly harassing the manager [illegible] if they continue to give the company [illegible]. [illegible] until Saturday next.

[illegible] THEATER.—The matinee, Saturday afternoon, [illegible] by a very fair audience—mostly ladies—and [illegible] performance was rendered with ordinary ability. The [illegible] piece of Fanchon, in the evening, was an improvement upon that of the preceding evening, the faults [illegible] representation having been remedied by a [illegible] study of the text. To-night, by request, [illegible] beautiful and affecting drama of East Lynne will be [illegible].

[illegible] JOB.—On Saturday a number of men were employed in cleaning up Stark street, between First and [illegible]. The rubbish and mud scraped up, was sufficient [illegible] a continuous bank—not quite so high as Ladd & [illegible] bank—from one street to the other, and will [illegible] at least seventy five cart loads. We do not know [illegible] the job was being done by public or private enterprise; we presume by the latter.

[illegible] ASTORIA.—From a passenger by the Okanagon, [illegible] that Judge Upton closed the term of the Circuit Court at Astoria on Friday, and took passage for San [illegible] on board the Ajax. A man by the name of [illegible] merchant at Astoria, was tried for the crime of [illegible] a young girl of about ten years, was convicted and sentenced to fifteen months in the penitentiary.

[illegible] AND A CRASH.—On Saturday the topmast of [illegible] staff was taken down for the purpose of cut[illegible] and resetting the mainmast which had become [illegible] decayed in the ground. While engaged in the [illegible] work, the mainmast careened over and fell upon [illegible] house [illegible] crushing [illegible] slightly and damaging a chimney. No great [illegible].

[illegible] BATH.—A young lady of Milwaukie fell over [illegible] yesterday from a skiff, into the Wallamet, at a [illegible] where the water was near thirty feet deep. The [illegible] who was near, plunged in and rescued her. [illegible] found it a decidedly bad day for a bath in the [illegible], though no serious consequences are anticipated to [illegible].

[illegible] SHOT HIMSELF.—Mr. Thomas Kiernan, [illegible] handling a small Sharp's pistol, yesterday, [illegible] discharged it, the ball taking effect in his thigh. [illegible] dressed the wound which is not, however, a serious one.

[illegible] MCCARTY.—A letter, received by a gentleman [illegible] town, says the Vancouver Register, states that [illegible] Dr. McCarty, for a long time chaplain at [illegible] lately fell down stairs in a hotel in Washington [illegible] broke his leg. He is recovering.

WASTING AWAY.—Charles Lucho, whose [illegible] was attempted at his own house, some weeks ago, has been sent to the hospital. He is reported to be wasting away from the effects of the injuries, being now no more than a mere living skeleton [illegible]. The perpetrators of the dastardly crime have never been discovered.

[illegible] Dispatches dated [illegible] and [illegible] Portland [illegible] in [illegible] for [illegible].

HOUSE BREAKING.—[illegible] the corner of North Third and B streets, known as the "White House," and carried off a lot of provisions, napkin rings, etc., from the dining room and kitchen. They effected an entrance through a kitchen window.

[illegible] It is stated that the contract for setting the poles of the Portland and Boise Telegraph [illegible] that section of the line between [illegible] and [illegible] has been let [illegible] the work will proceed without [illegible]. The poles have been delivered along that section of the line.

[illegible] A very large audience was out last evening at the [illegible] to hear the Rev. Mr. Eliot preach. Every available seat was occupied and very many had to stand.

The weather at the mouth of the Columbia is reported to be still quite rough.

STATE ITEMS.

The city authorities of Albany are taking measures to prevent small pox.

There has been but one case of small pox at Corvallis. The patient has recovered.

The Ellendale Woolen Factory is in active operation. We believe the factory at Brownsville is still closed.

The Albany Register gives the following shooting item: A youth, living a short distance from this city, took down his gun, one day not long ago, and started on a hunt. He struck a little prairie at the foot of the hills, and coming toward him he espied a deer. He shot at and killed it. He had hardly succeeded in getting his gun loaded, when following in the first one's tracks appeared another deer, which he shot and killed; then a third deer stalked in view, which he likewise slew. Thinking three venison were enough for one boy, he took the trail for home, but was intercepted by a bear, which he killed and added to his stock of game. The time occupied in killing was about twenty minutes.

The OREGONIAN of the 15th inst., referring to our remarks of the 11th, regarding the bacchanalian revel at Chicago, when General Sherman made an ass of himself and a number of shoulder-strapped comrades was marched to the station house by the police, "says it was shameful indeed, in Democratic estimation for Sherman to drive his sword through the vitals of the rebellion. That's what Democrats told us at the time." Yes, we told them so at the time, and will tell them so now. That the mad attempt of Abraham Lincoln to coerce the States of the South into submission was a revolutionary movement on his part which would have brought his neck to the gallows, had the government not been overthrown by the traitors who controlled it.—Commercial.

This is good re[illegible] Democratic doctrine. Keep it moving. The party which is burying itself under such a mountain of treason will never know a resurrection.

MASONIC FUNERAL.—Brethren of Harmony and Willamette Lodges, A. F. & A. M., are requested to meet at the Lodge Room, at half past one P. M. today.
By order of W. M.

LIKE "QUAKER" GUNS, artificial teeth are of little use and easily detected. Take care of the real ones. All you need is fragrant Sozodont. Use it daily and your teeth will be the last of nature's gifts to fail you.

"SPALDING'S GLUE" mends headless dolls and broken cradles.

Religion is a good thing, benevolence is a good thing, politics are a good thing, war is a good thing; money is a good thing; pestilence and famine are good things, and it is so with a hundred other matters with which we at times imagine we are cursed or blessed. Hard as these afflictions may seem, they all result in good one way or another. It is particularly so with PLANTATION BITTERS, but they must be used with moderation, and according to the directions. You must not abuse or indulge in them too freely; if you do, like other blessings, they will do harm by an over-indulgence or abuse.

OFFICE—Southwest corner Front and Yamhill streets opposite E. J. Northrup & Co.'s Hardware Store.

Cook's Patent, patented Dec. 3d, 1867, the improvement of which consists in doing the entire concave surface with [illegible] gold. It not only makes the plate durable as strong but [illegible] than the common Vulcanite Plate. It also can be made considerably thinner and lighter, whereas the price is but little above that for common Plates. Call and see specimens.

N. B. Dentists wishing to secure the office right for Dr. G. W. Cook's Improved Vulcanite Plates, can have it made out [illegible] by applying to the office.

AROMATIC
SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS.

TO THE CITIZENS OF OREGON:
I BEG LEAVE TO CALL THE ATTENTION OF THE citizens of Oregon to my celebrated AROMATIC SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS, a medicinal Diet Drink of eminently salutary qualities manufactured by myself exclusively, at my factory at Schiedam, in Holland.
In Gravel, Gout and Rheumatism, in Obstructions of the Bladder and Kidneys, its effects are prompt, decided, and invariably reliable.
It is now some twenty years since the Proprietor first introduced it to the American public, and during that time he has received over [illegible] letters from physicians, endorsing it as the purest [illegible] they have ever used in their practice.
It is made from barley of the finest quality selected with great care from the products of the most celebrated grain growing districts, is flavored with the essence of the aromatic juniper berry of Italy, and is rectified by a peculiar process which expels from the spirit every acrid particle.
As a means of preventing and correcting [illegible] disagreeable and often dangerous effects produced on the stomach and bowels by a change of water or climate, to which travelers, new settlers, and all unacclimated persons are peculiarly liable—the
SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS
Will be found absolutely infallible, while in cases of dropsy, gravel, obstructions of the kidneys, diseases of the bladder, stricture, dyspepsia and general debility, it is recommended most emphatically by the most distinguished members of the medical profession.
It is put up in quart and pint bottles, in cases with the name of the undersigned on the bottle and cork, and a fac simile of his signature on the label. For sale by all respectable druggists and country merchants.
Are you WEAK, DEBILITATED, NERVOUS! Is your sleep disturbed? Do you have palpitation of the heart, or an inclination to melancholy? Diseases of such nature require a prompt DIURETIC, which will be found in Wolfe's Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps.
Wolfe's Schiedam Schnapps
Is sold by all Grocers and Apothecaries.
Wolfe's Schiedam Schnapps
Is recommended by all the Medical Faculty.
Wolfe's Schiedam Schnapps
Is imitated and counterfeited, and purchasers will have to use caution in purchasing.
WOLFE'S AROMATIC SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS,
Imported by UDOLPHO WOLFE, of New York, solely for medicinal and private use.

How it all Happened

[illegible] From every Saturday.

[illegible] two letters for Mrs [illegible] Cedar Villa, Putney and [illegible] I must be [illegible] to find myself [illegible]

[illegible] last Wednes[illegible] suddenly [illegible] Mrs L[illegible] I have to pinch myself to [illegible] still flesh and blood. Ah [illegible] to things quick [illegible] name for forty-seven years [illegible] hanged my name by a miracle [illegible] I am sure I don't wish to speak against my native place. It is the sweetest village in England [illegible] advantage as locality [illegible] and society. But [illegible] may say [illegible] and promising youths with nothing [illegible] a man with position [illegible] however small is never seen in Binfield without a wife by his side. Is it any wonder then that I, not at all a beauty, should have some little bewilderment in identifying myself as the wife of Olinthus Lobb, Esq, and mistress of Cedar Villa?

Now I am going to tell how it all happened. Pamela and I are the daughters of a Colonel in the rebel army. He had retired as long ago as I can remember, and when he died he left us our little cottage and sixty pounds a year. He denied himself many a comfort to do this, and the memory of our father is very dear to us. We tried to do as he would have wished us, and some years ago when Mr Thompson, a most respectable man, but a miller, offered me his hand and heart, Pamela said 'No, we have our father's position to maintain.' So I had to decline very reluctantly. I must own [illegible] was a widower and my heart seemed to long to take care of those two dear little girls. After that one offer I never got another and I began to resign myself to what seemed my ordained portion. Not that this was an easy task for I am not like Pam. She is a very extraordinary woman indeed, many people say she ought to be a man. Pam is one of those people who never give way, and I really could not say which is strongest, her mind or her body, both being gigantic. If she had been walking about all day and is brought to confess that she is a little tired, the only way you ever see her take her ease is by sitting bolt upright in her chair. The suggestion of a sofa or couch would be met by a withering look of scorn only to be produced by one of those long noses with a bump in the middle. Pam is very proud of the family nose. I have often looked at her when in repose—I mean after she has retired, lying with her arms crossed, really reminding one of those noble crusaders or figures of the Middle Ages one sees in cathedrals.

Things in this life go by contraries, else why was not I christened Pamela, and she Britannia? Our mother so admired the novel, that she begged her first born might be called by the heroine's sweet name. This was one of the few occasions on which my father gave way, but even then conditionally—that he should choose the name of the second, and he chose the name of Britannia, and, unfortunately, I was the second. When we were children he always called me his chick, and, if we had a dispute, he invariably whistled or hummed 'Rule, Britannia.' But this did not last long, for no one could rule Pam. Even as a child, I felt her mental superiority. Why, at school I remember her repeating all the rules of grammar perfectly, scorning to copy the answer of a sum and positively understanding the use of the globes. There was but one occasion on which I felt the gratification of superiority, and that was when, during the dancing lesson, I caught our dear mother's approving smile as she watched me. Pam detested dancing, for having very long, thin limbs, she did not show to advantage in that accomplishment. I am still an admirer of Terpsichore, but if I stand up for a quadrille with the children, I always feel I am making myself ridiculous in Pam's eyes. I am very fond of children and young people, and nothing has made me more pleased than when some dear girl, whom I have [illegible] from a child, has confided to me her little love story.

I am afraid Pam is right. I am rather romantic. I have often felt so sorry for myself that I [illegible] no early love story of my own to look back upon—it keeps one's heart young and fresh. Pam says women were made for higher [illegible] than sitting thinking of lovers and whom they shall marry. Well of course she is right, but I really do not know that the women who take to chemistry, astronomy, and all the ologies, are a bit the happier or more [illegible], and I am sure some of the sweetest natures and kindest hearts I have met [illegible] pretty [illegible] who delighted in turning the heads of all the men they met no matter whether they were eighteen or eighty. I must confess I have often felt [illegible] that men are weak. Nobody can thoroughly understand this, unless it has been their privilege to be associated with a strong-minded superior woman. Dear me! what a [illegible] they are then! I feel it must have [illegible] trial to Pam to live with me, not being a kindred mind. When I have thought her feeling dull on this account, and [illegible] to get up a little argument, how [illegible] I have failed—my knowledge has [illegible] forsaken me. And positively, something I had [illegible] from her silence that [illegible] But when I got [illegible] of my say, then she would fix her eyes [illegible] me with "[illegible] ma, may I ask [illegible] sonal favor, never to display your [illegible] ignorance before a third person?" Either that or I [illegible] a lapsus linguæ in my mode of expression, and then trying feebly to defend myself on the score of Walker or Maunder Pam would demand, in a voice which seemed to run cold down my back, "[illegible] who, Walker and Maunder [illegible]" I really felt quite confused, because I had not the slightest idea, for, except in the dictionaries, I had never heard of either of the gentlemen. It is certainly most provoking in me to be so stupid, and one of my great pleasures now is, to hope that, by sending many nice comforts to my dear sister, I shall prove I have not been unmindful of her forbearance.

So Pam and I began to get old—she got thinner and I got fatter. The people we remembered as grown up when we were young dropped off one by one. It seemed such a long time since we were children, everything was altered; what were facts then were idle stories now, boys and girls of ten and twelve put me to the blush; the parts of speech were entirely confused. Places which used to be in one country were in another now. There was no William Tell and no Joan of Arc. Henry VIII was a good fatherly man and Richard III instead of [illegible] wading to the throne in the blood of his dearest relatives, lived and died an exemplary brother and uncle. People we had seen married were grandfathers and grandmothers, children we had seen christened had boys and girls who called us Old Pam and the Ancient Briton.

How he perfectly glared at the two ladies, who didn't seem to mind it, though had it been me I should have felt as if I could have shrunk into a nutshell.

We were soon at our journey's end. My companion [illegible] out with the greatest politeness and then with the manners of a courtier said 'May I be permitted to inquire where I shall have the pleasure of returning this?' still holding the handkerchief in his hand.

Now this was embarrassing. Pam [illegible] blame me [illegible] and I should never hear the last of my [illegible] Yet I felt I should like to get my handkerchief back. So [illegible] moment I told him not to trouble himself but should he be passing the station he [illegible] leave it [illegible] the guard of the Binfield train, directed to Miss B. Plummidge, Binfield, to be left until called for. He lifted his hat and I was soon looking out for [illegible] to the appointed meeting place with Pamela.

Binfield is about twelve miles from London and it was our custom to go to town twice a year to receive our dividends, to buy any special articles of dress we needed and to feast our eyes on the tempting beauties displayed in the shop windows. This had been a plan of our dear father's, and during the London day we often spoke of him—how surprised he would have been at this alteration or that improvement, or how pleased to see something which drew forth our wonder or admiration. On this particular occasion Pam had been staying with a friend of ours at [illegible] and we agreed that we should meet to do our business, spend the day and return home together in the evening. I always felt quite knocked up after one of these days, but we could not accept our friend's invitation to stay the night as we had a return ticket. Traveling is expensive, and Pam said our position obliged us to go first class. Dear, dear, I have been sometimes led to ask myself why money and position do not always go together. The one is very trying without the other. The many things we have been obliged to do and also to do without because it would not become our position. Pam would never hear of a charwoman but we must have a servant. And really girls have enormous appetites and very ungrateful dispositions, or our Susan never could have said we were mean. But perhaps I'm hard on the poor thing. Had she known how often Pam and I declared to each other we couldn't eat another morsel, though far from being satisfied, in order that she might have a good dinner, she would not, I think, have said we were mean.

But to return to the morning on which I was to go to London alone. Five minutes to nine the train was to start, but I was so much afraid of not being in time that I was ready at half past seven. It being ridiculous to leave home at that hour I took up a book, not that I could read either because of the unpleasant feeling that I might forget something which Pam would be certain to ask for. Eight o'clock struck. It would only take twenty minutes to walk slowly to the station and I had then half an hour to spare. No matter, I would start at the quarter past, in case of accidents. And a very fortunate thing it was I did start, for I had passed Bull's Cross when I discovered I had no pocket handkerchief. However, I had time to hurry back and put one in my pocket. Ah! how little I thought that that trifling incident would be the means of bringing about the great event of my life.

When I reached the platform I looked about, but saw nobody I knew. The guard put me into an empty carriage, and though several gentlemen passed they only nodded 'good morning.' So alone I started, but not to remain alone long, for at every station people got in and out until we reached Chingford. Here I thought I was to be left by myself again, but, just as the train was moving off, a middle-aged gentleman rushed up. The guard opened the door of my carriage, and he was obliged to jump in, making use, as I thought, of such an improper expression that if Pamela had been there, she would certainly have given him in charge. But our ears have often deceived us. I have since found out that he merely remarked, on finding a lady alone, 'deux seule.' Still at the time I felt rather indignant, and I looked at the offender with some curiosity. He was a very thin, tall man, and so oddly dressed that I began to feel a little uncomfortable, and wish some one else in the carriage with me. Why should he wear white trousers? The day was not warm. Were they made of duck or jean? I suppose I must have been scanning his garb, for presently he said in a loud voice

"Well, madam, may I ask if you see anything peculiar in my dress, that you are honoring it with so much attention?"

I really thought I must have sunk through the seat of the carriage. Oh! if Pamela had been there! I tried to stammer out an apology, and he waved his hand with what seemed an ironical leer, saying, "O, no offence, no offence." Well, what with my confusion and annoyance I was ready to faint. I felt I must have a little air, so without a thought I pulled down the window. In an instant he fired out again

'Bless me, madam, you are at liberty to commit suicide of course, but you don't want to commit murder, too.'

'Murder! suicide!' O dear, dear, what should I do! would the train never reach the next station! He must have seen my terror, for he said —

"There, there, don't look as if you thought I was mad; but if you suffered from rheumatism as I do, madam, you'd look upon a person who put you in a draught as your natural enemy."

I certainly felt devoutly thankful now that Pamela was not with me, or there would have been [illegible]. We stopped once more, and took in two ladies and a gentleman. The train moved on, and soon I heard my gruff neighbor tut-tutting, and muttering something he would do to somebody, when I discovered that his [illegible] was beginning to bleed, and he was searching vainly in his pocket for handkerchief. I must confess my first feeling was not one of sorrow for him. He had been what I considered offensive to me—an unprotected female, with nobody to retaliate for her; but then I remembered how near I had been in a similar plight to his; had I not started at the time I did, I should have been minus a handkerchief too. I involuntarily put my hand in my pocket. Yes, there it lay, neatly folded up, but I would not take it out to make matters worse by unnecessary display. At this time the poor gentleman was obliged to put his head out of the window. The ladies exchanged looks expressive of anything but pleasure, the young man eyed him with a stare of the most profound indifference, as if it were the usual thing to travel with people who chose that their noses should bleed; and he did not desire to interfere with him, only he wished to impress upon us that he was at no loss, for he produced a spotless handkerchief, slowly shook it out, and used it most unnecessarily, and I thought heartlessly, and then a small voice began to whisper "Britannia Plummage, are you acting a Christian's part? Have you never heard the story of a good Samaritan?"

I put my hand into my pocket again, I tried to feel if it was one of my best handkerchiefs. I argued that if I hadn't two it would be different, but you were not supposed to distress yourself for somebody you didn't know. Why, one might do nothing else but give away pocket-handkerchiefs! Then there was Pamela, she would never approve of it, and must never know of it. Oh! it was exactly like one of my Quixotic fits. I might be quite certain I was making myself ridiculous, and I resolved to entertain the notion no longer. But, in spite of trying to look at the passing scenery and to consider what I should purchase, how best lay out my small amount of money, memory would recall the "sweet story of old," and I could but hang my head from a feeling that I was not one of those who tried to 'go and do likewise.'

A Plummidge hang her head! My father's daughter ashamed to look the whole world in the face! I am one of the weak specimens of my sex, I know, but at that moment Pamela herself could not have felt more bold. Without a moment's hesitation I handed my nice new handkerchief, embroidered with 'B P' in the corner, saying

'I am afraid, sir, you are put to inconvenience. Will you accept this? I shall not require it.'

I could not see his face, but from the side glance I got I think it wore an expression of great astonishment. However, he took the handkerchief without a word, and I quite imagined he did not intend thanking me. Presently he drew in his head, his face looking redder than ever by the close proximity of the white pocket handkerchief, and said

'Madam, I am obliged to you, very much obliged to you. Madam, you're an angel. You're more, you're a woman, and the only one in the carriage, too.'

She was there, and we spent a delightful day. After we had done our business and shopping, we went to a museum in Jermyn street, where there were stones and fossils about which dear Pamela seemed to know much more than the gentleman who showed us over. She caught him tripping two or three times, and this put her in such good humor that she stopped before all the shops in Regent street where I wanted to look in. Now this was very kind, for I am sure any one who could ever recollect those dreadful names of things which exist before Adam and Noah must feel it a great come down to be asked to look at French muslins at ten and six pence and bonnets 'as worn in Paris' at one guinea.

I experienced some little inconvenience from the want of my handkerchief, such as when Pam would tell me to take a black off my nose. I had then to contrive to get behind her and furtively rub it off with my glove. Tired enough we were when we reached home that night, but we had seen plenty to think of and talk about. The next week passed rapidly enough, when one evening as Pam and I were taking a walk near the station one of the porters came up and said to me

'If you please, miss, there's a parcel for you here. I should have brought it up, but it says to be left till called for.'

Was ever anything so unfortunate! I felt I was getting red and that Pamela's eye was on me. It is certainly a great misfortune to be such a weak creature as I am. I felt guilty of quite a crime at that moment, and by a great effort could only stammer out something about a person's nose bleeding and that I had lent them my handkerchief. If Pam had only not asked if the person were a man or a woman, and if I could but [illegible] that it was I who offered the handkerchief. 'A man, thought!' In five minutes I felt that I [illegible] and shall never [illegible] the affair out of her. She preserved a solemn silence until we reached the station and met the porter with a large [illegible] parcel.

'There must have been some mistake,' I said, 'mine was but a pocket handkerchief.'

I hesitated and debated, but hesitation and debating were cut short by Pam desiring the man to take the parcel to our house, and an ominous silence was maintained till we reached home.

I remember with what trepidation I then asked whether we had not better open the parcel and see what was in it, and though Pamela was dying of curiosity she only said she had no desire to interfere with me in such a matter. So I cut the string, and soon my bewildered eyes were fixed on a pink brocade silk, so rich and stiff that it would have stood alone. But there was no name, no handkerchief, nothing. I couldn't describe Pamela's wrath nor my distress. I only know that that evening I felt that henceforth I was to be regarded as a bold woman, and a disgrace to the name of Plummidge.

And what was to be done with the unfortunate parcel. I couldn't keep it, and I couldn't send it back because I didn't know the name of the sender. Why did I lend my handkerchief, and when I did lend it why was I so mean as ever to want to have it back again?

Matters stood thus when we received an invitation to dinner from our doctor's wife. Now we often went out to tea or to small evening parties, but the circle in which we moved in Binfield was not much given to asking friends to dine. So this was rather an event for us. Pam became a trifle more gracious, and by the day named she was almost herself. I could have hugged her. I felt so glad not to feel the Pariah I had done for the last ten days. Pam looked very well, quite handsome I thought. I am the best workwoman and I had trimmed her black silk dress with some nice lace a cousin of ours had given me, and felt quite proud of my work and my sister.

I was too taken up with the delight of having all pleasant again to think much about how I looked. Besides, Pam is so clever that people were not in the habit of taking much notice of me, unless they were deaf or invalids, and then they seemed to like to talk to me. Quite prepared to enjoy myself at Dr Fletcher's, I entered the drawing room behind Pam, when—O, it couldn't be!—yes, it was—there on the sofa sat my eccentric friend of the railway carriage. I am perfectly sure if my nerves hadn't given way I should have rushed out. As it was everything and everybody seemed swimming about the room, a gurgling of water sounded in my ears, and a voice seemed to come from a long way off whispering, 'Mr Olinthus Lobb, Miss Britannia Plummidge.' For fully ten minutes I had not the slightest idea what any one said or did. However when I seemed to return to the world about me, everybody was talking most agreeably to everybody else, and I began to breathe again, especially when I saw that my friend did not intend showing that we had ever met before. We spent a delightful evening. Pam was quite charmed with our new acquaintance. He gave way to her, agreed with her opinions, and, though he took but little notice of me, treated us both with the greatest politeness.

I declare I thought Pam had made a conquest when he insisted on seeing us home and asked permission to call and inquire after us the next morning. Pam had found out that Mr Lobb was an old friend of Dr Fletcher's, and under the shield of a fiery quick manner and very eccentric appearance, was always doing the kindest actions, which he would never acknowledge, or permit himself to be thanked for. Mrs Fletcher said she advised the unmarried ladies to look after him, as he was very well off, and devoted to ladies, though, from having had an early disappointment and spending most of his life in India and China, he had never been married.

That night when Pam had left me, I opened my chest of drawers and looked at the pink brocade, and smiled to think, that after all, I might wear that 'bone of contention' at Pam's wedding, and that then she might be more indulgent about my indelicate boldness in offering my handkerchief to a stranger. I made up my mind to speak to him about the parcel, should I have an opportunity, as in case of nothing coming of his attentions, I could send it back. But I would be very careful in my manner and in what I said, so as not to endanger my dear sister's prospects.

A week passed and still Mr Lobb was at Binfield. He had a room at the 'Dragon,' and his attentions were getting almost pointed. I never dared breathe my thoughts to Pam, not knowing how she would take it, but when it came to inviting the Fletchers and ourselves to a little picnic, and he giving Pam his arm most of the way, I began to think she must see that all this meant something. I had never been able to speak to him, but the day after the picnic he called. Pam was out, so I mustered up courage and told him of the parcel I had received "which I was sure had come from him, and though I knew how kindly he meant it, still I thought I would rather not accept it, as—"

'As what?' he said. 'You think this little trifle came from me, and yet you won't accept it? Now I tell you what it is, Miss Britannia, I will offer you something else, and if you refuse that—why I'll—I'll burn the dress, and I'll return—no, I won't—whatever comes I'll keep that handkerchief,' and upon the spot he offered me his hand and heart, and asked me to be Mrs Lobb.

I was never more surprised, though Pam said afterwards if she ever allowed thoughts of the kind to enter her mind she should have had her suspicions. But I cannot tell how thankful I was to find Pam had not taken his attentions as meaning anything but a tribute to her superiority.

I used to smile sometimes, as I saw what an amusement I and my old lover were to the young people. They could not comprehend the quiet enjoyment we looked forward to in going down the hill of life together. They were rather frightened at the red face and sharp voice, and could not understand that his heart was as fresh as that of the youngest of those who laughed.

I was pleased to find that many people would miss me and be sorry to lose me, and when we were married, notwithstanding, Mr Lobb gave my old people a dinner and my school children a treat, there were sad faces at parting. My dear husband says he is getting all his sharp edges rasped off, and he knows his friends think him hen pecked and pity him. When he allows his voice and manners to be more like his soft tender heart, he says 'Well, well, my dear! soon there won't be much left of old Lin Lobb except his buck inexpressibles, and I can tell you I won't leave them off, for they first attracted the attention of the woman who has made me the happiest man in England!'

Weekly Oregonian.
FOR 1869.
Nineteenth Volume!
Only $3.00 a Year.

By common consent the OREGONIAN ranks first among the papers published in the Northwest. It is the oldest paper in the State and its circulation and influence are greater than that of any other two papers combined. As a journal of enterprise in gathering the latest intelligence and in giving in each issue a larger amount and greater variety of reading matter it has no competitor. It is thoroughly identified with this city and State and neighboring Territories, where the number of its readers and its influence are constantly increasing.

An unflinching advocate of sound Union principles, it at the same time pays special attention not only to MATTERS OF GENERAL INTEREST, but to everything of moment to the great

Agricultural, Manufacturing,
AND MINING INTERESTS,

And to the development of the resources and settlement of the Northwest.

Its columns contain a carefully prepared digest of

are furnished every week, giving the Financial, Dry Goods, Hardware, and General Market Reports of Portland, and the latest reports by Telegraph of the San Francisco and New York markets. These reports are acknowledged to be the most accurate published in the State.

In every department it will be, as it has been, the foremost in the State in the field of journalism. Being firmly established, it will go forward with confidence, making new plans for improvement and usefulness, and hopes to gain increased circulation and support.
